Dear Chairmen Grassley and Neal and Ranking Members Wyden and Brady:

As national organizations at the forefront of improving lives for children and families, thank you for your leadership in beginning to address the needs of families during the COVID-19 pandemic. Like nearly every sector of society right now, families served through the Maternal, Infant, and Early Childhood Home Visiting program (MIECHV) are facing new challenges. We urge you to provide emergency flexibility and a one-time investment of $100 million for MIECHV, as outlined below, to help preserve this valuable program:

- Prioritize a one-time $100 million appropriation for MIECHV. These funds can be used to train home visitors to deliver services through technology that enables home visits from a distance, as well as tangible needs for families including technology, formula, diapers, etc.
- Allow virtual visits to be considered home visits through the end of the calendar year to safely preserve valuable relationships without being penalized.
- Maintain all funding for and staffing levels of MIECHV programs regardless of potential temporary reductions in enrollment to preserve the existing home visiting infrastructure.

MIECHV is more important now than ever, as families who already faced complex needs have been thrust into chaos due to COVID-19. Home visitors are a critical link of support for families who are facing a variety of challenges that will be exacerbated by this crisis. With public health at risk and the social safety net in higher demand, these professionals are working overtime to deliver services to families in an unprecedented environment and through creative means.

In order to meet the needs of the most vulnerable, home visitors need flexibility and additional resources. MIECHV-funded programs have begun pivoting to accommodate new ways of reaching families, including expanding telehealth and virtual home visits, but they must have the certainty that these visits are covered by the MIECHV program. Our community is committed to preserving the invaluable relationships that have already been established between home visitors and families, and to making sure families get the information and help they need to stay healthy and safe during this unprecedented crisis.

The undersigned national organizations appreciate your attention to these critical needs as Congress continues to develop legislation to provide relief during this crisis.

Sincerely,
